Chef Katt realized that Los Angeles had lots of Thai food available but most of it was diluted to accommodate the American palette.

Her husband "Goldy" who works in film, begged her for lunch one day on set... Katt brought her Panang curry and the whole whole crew begged for a taste.

This began a small catering service for the film sets all over Hollywood. Celebrities and crew were blown away and often asked if there was a restaurant they could go to and eat... this sparked the idea for Katt & Goldy.

After a few years of looking, the opportunity to purchase SPICY SUGAR THAI in Long Beach presented itself. Founded by Sugar (famed Jitlada Chef Tui's Daughter) Spicy Sugar Long Beach was already a staple in the neighborhood.

As Sugar focused on her late father's influential Jitlada restaurant, Katt and Goldy remodeled the dining room, adjusted the already amazing menu to accommodate Katt's Isan influence, and the rest is history.
